Re: Douglas Nelson
Claim Number: 02-397-500-0
DOL: 12/18/06

Dear Mr. Nelson:

As you are aware, I was retained by your insurer, California State Automobile Association, Inter-Insurance Bureau, (hereinafter "CSAA-IIB") to assist in the resolution of the above-mentioned claim under your policy of insurance with CSSA-IIB. I am writing to advise you of CSAA-IIBs' determination of your claim.

For the following reasons CSAA-IIB has declined your claim in its entirety. PCS

As you are aware we required additional information to respond to your claim. Initially CSAA-IIB wrote to you to request that you provide a recorded statement. You failed to cooperate with this request.

You were then notified that we required your examination under oath (EUO). We notified you by letter that your EUO had been scheduled for June 1, 2007. In that correspondence you were notified that your failure to cooperate in your EUO would be grounds for denial of your entire claim. You were asked to call the undersigned to confirm your appearance at the EUO. You failed to confirm your appearance at the EUO and all attempts to contact you by telephone at the telephone number that you had previously provided to CSAA-IIB were unsuccessful. The June 1, 2007 EUO was cancelled.

We rescheduled your EUO for June 12th, 2007 and notified you of this date by certified letter. The EUO went forth as scheduled on June 12th, 2007 but you failed to appear. The certified letter was subsequently returned.

The policy of insurance under which you made your claim states in SECTION I - CONDITIONS 2. Your Duties After Loss section "d. (3)" that a Claimant is required to Correct premature skull fusion at Children's Hospital Oakland.

Craniosynostosis

What it is: At birth, the skull's seven bones are joined with strong, fibrous tissue called sutures.

In rare cases, one or more of the sutures close prematurely and the bones fuse, preventing the brain from growing properly and causing a misshapen head.

Normal sutures allow the skull to expand evenly around the growing brain.

Sagittal synostosis The fused center joint causes the front and back of the skull to be pushed out as the brain grows.

Endoscopic surgery

The surgery is performed through small incisions and guided by a miniature light and camera.

① Two small incisions are made in the scalp near the fused joint.

② Fused bone sections are cut by gaining access through the incisions. A device lifts the bone away from the brain. The section of fused bone is cut with scissors and other tools.

③ Side sections of bone are also cut, to allow the head to be reshaped.

After the surgery

The separated bones can now spread apart as the child's brain grows. Usually, the child can go home three days after the surgery.

A custom-fitted helmet applies pressure to the misshapen areas, gradually pushing the skull into a more normal shape. The helmet is worn for three to four months.

Nations scientists

The stark choices laid out Saturday by the agency's Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) describe the daunting task if the world is to avoid the consequences of a planet heated up by more than 3.6 degrees Fahrenheit (2 degrees Celsius) since 2000.

The panel, which distilled research from about 2,500 scientists, avoided moral conclusions about how much global warming is too much.

"The scientists now have done their work. Call on political leaders to do theirs," U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said upon formally receiving the report Saturday in Valencia, Spain.

"Only urgent, global action will do," said Ban, calling on the United States and China — the world's two biggest polluters —

Plan suggests canal is crucial to Delta revival

■ Government biologists call proposal for dual conveyance system of aqueduct, pumps 'the most attractive option'

By Mike Taugher
STAFF WRITER

Government biologists have concluded the most promising way to save the Delta is to divert water around it through a canal — an idea often derided as a Southern California water grab that would ensure the destruction of the region.

Wildlife agencies recently told planners that a Peripheral Canal is "the most attractive option" to help quench California's thirst for more drinking and irrigation water while fixing the Delta's dying ecosystem.

Voters rejected the canal in 1982, and opposition was fierce in Contra Costa because of the threat a canal poses to the local water supply.

By siphoning water out of the Sacramento River before it reaches the Delta, the canal would reduce the amount of fresh water near Contra Costa Water District's intakes in the south Delta and increase the concentration of pollution and salt water.

If built, however, a new canal probably would be operated and managed in conjunction with the existing state and federal intakes near Tracy. That would ensure more water stays in the Delta and could help offset the deleterious effects a new canal would have on water quality in the south Delta, the sole water source for 500,000 people.

The call for in-depth study of a Peripheral Canal comes during fast-moving negotiations for a pact to stabilize the state's dwindling and increasingly vulnerable water supplies while also protecting the environment.

If the biologists and the state's

Lasting effects of spill emerge

■ Experts say the bunker fuel will hide in wetlands, shores to crop up again

By Douglas Fischer
STAFF WRITER

The eelgrass restoration had taken 18 months and about $200,000. The plant, perhaps the foremost nursery for critters at the base of the San Francisco Bay's food web, waved like a green carpet less than three feet beneath the water's surface near Tiburon. And there, shimmering on the high tide just above the 100-acre patch, floated the deathly, iridescent sheen of bunker fuel from the ill-fated Cosco Busan.

Almost two weeks after the container ship hit a Bay Bridge support and spilled 58,000 gallons of toxic fuel, the legacy of the spill will be written not so much by the oiled and dead murres and scaups that washed ashore in its immediate aftermath, but in the acres of tarred wetlands, marshes and mudflats harboring so much of the Bay's diversity.

By now, oil from the Nov. 7 spill has largely dispersed. Cleanup efforts have switched from recovering oil to scouring beaches. And wildlife experts fret that the spill's true impact is just emerging: Tarlike fuel oil blanketing fragile marshland and hiding in rocky bluffs and rip-rapped

Crack vs. Cocaine Sentencing (Kimbrough v. United States)
Under the federal mandatory minimum sentencing scheme, it takes only five grams of crack to get a five-year prison sentence, but it takes 500 grams of powder cocaine to get the same five-year term. A federal judge, who believed the sentencing guidelines are unreasonable, sentenced Kimbrough to a 15-year term for possessing 250g with intent to distribute 56 grams of crack, instead of 19-22 years prescribed by federal sentencing guidelines. The prosecutor has challenged this, the shorter sentence.

Maya Harris
CEO of real ACLU
What's at stake? Justice, equality and fairness. There's no legitimate justification for treating crack 100 times more harshly than powder cocaine. Moreover, the law has a severely racially discriminatory impact, disproportionately incarcerating African Americans for lengthy sentences. In papers filed with the Court, the ACLU argues that federal sentencing judges should have discretion to sentence below the existing guidelines for crack offenses. Voter ID Challenge (Crawford v. Marion County Election Board)

The ACLU, NAACP and others are challenging Indiana's voter ID law, the most restrictive law in the nation. It requires voters to show a federal- or state-issued photo ID, such as a passport or driver's license, to cast their ballot, even though no evidence of voter fraud in Indiana can justify it. What's at stake? Voting is a fundamental right that should not be subject to unnecessary burdens imposed by the state. Millions of Americans of voting age do not have official federal or state identification. The Indiana voter ID law—and similar laws being adopted or considered in other states—will disenfranchise many voters who do not have or cannot afford to obtain the approved IDs and will disproportionately impact the voting rights of the elderly, poor and people of color.

Habeas Corpus (Boumediene v. Bush and Al Odah v. United States)
Guantanamo detainees being held without charges or trial are seeking the right to challenge the legality of their imprisonment in U.S. federal courts—a right other prisoners have under the Constitution. The Bush Administration wants to deprive federal courts of that authority. What's at stake? A core Constitutional right to due process. For centuries, the writ of habeas corpus has allowed individuals detained by the U.S. government to challenge the lawfulness of their detention.

Dear Mr. Nelson:

As you are aware, I was retained by your insurer, California State Automobile Association, Inter-Insurance Bureau, (hereinafter "CSAA-IIB") to assist in the resolution of the above-mentioned claim under your policy of insurance with CSAA-IIB. I am writing to advise you of CSAA-IIB's determination of your claim.

For the following reasons CSAA-IIB has declined your claim in its entirety.

As you are aware we required additional information to respond to your claim. Initially CSAA-IIB wrote to you to request that you provide a recorded statement. You failed to cooperate with this request.

You were then notified that we required your examination under oath (EUO). We notified you by letter that your EUO had been scheduled for June 1, 2007. In that correspondence you were notified that your failure to cooperate in your EUO would be grounds for denial of your entire claim. You were asked to call the undersigned to confirm your appearance at the EUO. You failed to confirm your appearance at the EUO and all attempts to contact you by telephone at the telephone number that you had previously provided to CSAA-IIB were unsuccessful. The June 1, 2007 EUO was cancelled.

We rescheduled your EUO for June 12th, 2007 and notified you of this date by certified letter. The EUO went forth as scheduled on June 12th, 2007 but you failed to appear. The certified letter was subsequently returned.

The policy of insurance under which you made your claim states in SECTION I - CONDITIONS 2. Your Duties After Loss section "d. (3)" that a Claimant is required to

Alameda County parks up for upgrades for disabled

FROM STAFF REPORTS

OAKLAND — Parks in Castro Valley and Ashland will be upgraded for the disabled, thanks to a $261,679 grant from Alameda County.

County supervisors on Tuesday agreed to pay the Hayward Area Recreation and Park District $200,000 for Adobe Center Park in Castro Valley and $61,679 for Fairmont Linear Park in Ashland.

Jointly, HARD and the Castro Valley Unified School District will contribute $400,000 to the equipment and restroom projects, for a total of $600,000 in costs.

HARD will buy play equipment and install a new restroom at Adobe Park, next to the Adobe Art Center on San Miguel Avenue. The equipment and restroom will meet Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requirements.

James Sorensen, the county's Community Development Agency director, said the new play equipment and building will tie into proposed improvements at the neighborhood park. They include picnic areas, a skate park and walking paths surrounding an open grass area.

Work on the upgraded Adobe Park will begin next year.

of Brea, CA, and one great-grandchild, Angelita, 8, of Folsom, CA.

Our mother, Ellis, was a loyal and devoted fan of the Oakland Raiders, San Diego Chargers and San Diego Padres teams. She always kept a fine home for her family, and she greatly enjoyed her garden and precious avocado grove. She will be deeply missed by her family.

A private family gathering will take place at a later time.

Oakland-based band joins lawsuit against cigarette maker, magazine

■ Plaintiffs allege ad had targeted indie music fans

By Jason Dearen
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Two bands featured in Rolling Stone magazine's "Indie Rock Universe," an illustrated insert sandwiched between music-themed Camel cigarette ads, are suing the publication and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Oakland-based band Xiu Xiu and Toronto, Canada-based F— Up filed the lawsuit Monday in Alameda County Superior Court, alleging unauthorized use of the bands' names for commercial advantage and unfair business practices.

The ads in Rolling Stone promoted Camel's "The Farm: Free Range Music" campaign to support independent record labels.

"Many bands are angered and offended by what occurred," said Christopher Hunt, a San Francisco attorney for the two bands. Hunt and his clients are seeking class action status, which, if granted, would allow members from the more than 150 bands featured in the ad to join the suit.

"The 'Indie Rock Universe' feature . . . is not an advertisement," Mark Neschis, a spokesman for Rolling Stone, said in an e-mail. "It was conceived and created exclusively by the editorial department, without any review by or consultation with any advertiser."

The bands claim that the aim of the ads was to use the artists' names as a "credibility-generating engine within the advertising apparatus designed to deliver these commercial 'goods.'"

This is not the first suit to arise from the ads, which ran in the magazine's Nov. 15 anniversary issue. At least seven states have filed lawsuits against R.J. Reynolds for violating the terms of a landmark 1998 settlement between 46 states and the tobacco industry.

The settlement included a ban on the industry pitching to minors, and the agreement includes a provision against using cartoons in advertisements.

David Howard, a spokesman for Winston-Salem, N.C.-based R.J. Reynolds, said the firm had not yet been served with the bands' lawsuit, and therefore could not comment on it. But he did say the company had no voice in determining the placement of its ads in Rolling Stone.

"Since that was editorial content, we had no knowledge of what was going to be included in that content other than it was going to be about indie rock," he said.

According to the bands, the foldout was a carefully constructed ad for cigarettes that was intended to lure fans of independent music.

"Indeed, that is the only possible impression that can be left on the mind of any sentient twenty-first century being with eyesight," the suit states.

Javier Rodriguez, 10, chose "Antz" for his cousin Jose. Thumbing through the purple book carts festooned with red garland, fifth-grader Noemi Diaz plucked "Mig the Pig" from the shelf for her cousin Samantha.

Alia Cortez, 10, picked up 15 books for relatives and friends.

"I even got the babies books," she said. The lucky tots are her twin brothers, Alonso and Salvador, only 7 months old. She plans to read to them herself.

"They understand it. You don't think they do, but they do," she said. "And as they get older, they'll learn how to read."

Done with her own shopping, fifth-grader Yarit Morales went to work on wrapping presents for others.

With a few folds and creases, the 10-year-old snapped "Fluffy the Snow Pig" into a picture-perfect present for under the tree. For "The Foot Book" by Dr. Seuss, she chose special paper decorated with Old St. Nick clinging to a giant candy cane. The zip of a tape dispenser ripped through the air.

"There you go," she said. "Next!"

The enthusiasm for books nearly drained Santa's shelf entirely by Wednesday. But parent Jill Borchardt persuaded Half Price Books and Bay Books to donate more.

"It's a good cause," Borchardt said. "How could you not want to help?"

Judge rejects plea bargain in ID theft case

BAY AREA: Jurist says five years is too short a prison sentence for Richmond woman who stole from teachers

By Malaika Fraley
STAFF WRITER

A Contra Costa judge Friday rejected the guilty plea of a Richmond woman accused of stealing driver's licenses and credit cards from Bay Area teachers while posing as a teacher's aide and then using their financial accounts to go on shopping sprees.

Judge Nancy Davis Stark said Tynesha West, 26, deserved more time in state prison than the five years previously agreed upon by attorneys and the court, based on the trouble West has gotten into since she was jailed on 69 counts of fraud, theft and identity theft.

"Since I received the probation report, I am convinced five years is way too light of a sentence," Davis Stark said. She cited West's behavior record in jail, which includes threats to jail staff, fighting, disruptive behavior and possession of contraband.

The judge made the announcement at a hearing at which West was supposed to be sentenced to five years in exchange for pleading guilty to all counts. Davis Stark said West can now either plead guilty again and receive a 10-year sentence, or she can go to trial and risk a maximum sentence of up to 35 years and eight months in state prison if convicted.

Before the hearing began, West laughed with courtroom bailiffs, saying she was "having a good day," much to the chagrin of two Danville schoolteachers

RICHMOND: Police say man accused of multiple holdups targeted Latinos near his residence

By Karl Fischer

When the large mugger took $500 from Ligia Rivera's boyfriend last month in a Richmond parking garage, she wondered why he wasn't wearing a mask.

When she saw him again in the neighborhood two weeks later, she wondered why he bothered to lumber off after she made eye contact.

"It is so stupid that he did it in his own neighborhood, where somebody can see him and recognize him. He didn't even cover his face," Rivera said. "I am one person who, if I see him, I will tell the police. I won't be letting him do that to other people."

Too few people feel that way, police said this week, which may explain why a 20-year-old robbery suspect managed to mug at least six people and possibly as many as 11 in two months, all within blocks of his home.

The Contra Costa District Attorney's Office charged Wade
